DISCOVERY MUSEUM AND OUTDOOR AMPHITEATRE PLANNED FOR ANDERSON MARSH STATE HISTORIC PARK

Anderson Marsh State Historic Park located off of Hwy. 53 is a beautiful natural landscape. Visitors to the property immediately sense that they are transformed to another time. The land itself is rich in Native American culture as local Pomo Indians called the property home over 10,000 years ago. European culture is apparent with the appearance of the old ranch house and barns that rest among the 600 year old Valley Oaks. It is a special place filled with wild life, history and ecological lessons for young and old.

Currently, The Anderson Marsh Interpretive Association (AMIA) and Children's Museum of Art and Science are working with the California State Department of Regional Parks to build a 10,000 square foot Discovery Center. This facility would include a hands on science classroom, museum with historical and wild life exhibits as well as a 500 seat rustic outdoor performing arts amphitheater. The entire facility would provide opportunities for visitors, local residents and school classrooms to learn about science, geology, wild life, archeology, ecology and history. The outdoor amphitheater will provide the perfect backdrop for performances in dance, music, theatre and special events.

CMAS and AMIA are fully engaged in fund raising activities including writing grant applications, endowments and support from local agencies and individuals. It is expected that the facility will cost approximately 2 million to build with actual project completion taking 3-5 years.
